Calling all rule-breakers, risk-takers & change-makers! The University of Queensland (UQ) ‘Weekend of Startups’ is BACK, and BETTER than ever! Up to 100 students, alumni and interested members of the entrepreneurial community will spend 54 hours formulating and pitching a new related business.
Purpose

The event serves multiple purposes such as networking, creating, learning and converting the project into an actual business. There are many success stories of startups that started out as an idea at an event like this.

Background

The UQ Innovation and Entrepreneurship Society is the student society for aspiring entrepreneurs from The University of Queensland.

Our goal as a society is to provide a platform for everyone to start their own business venture. We take our members through a highly enriching process starting from imparting the entrepreneurial skills to helping them network with like-minded students on campus and organising multiple events to help take their ideas forward.

Event details

Who: UQ students, UQ alumni and interested members of the entrepreneurial community

When: Friday 16 August - Sunday 18 August 2019

Where: Room 303, Advanced Engineering Building, UQ St Lucia Campus

About the event

Over the weekend, participants will be challenged to find their crew and come up with the next hot business idea. With support from our team and mentors, by Sunday night, they’ll have prototyped & validated their big idea and their team will be ready to deliver their killer pitch to our experienced panel of judges.

Launched in 2016, this is one of Queensland’s signature events. Focusing on ‘sustainability’, UQ Weekend of Startups is hosted at the University of Queensland’s St Lucia Campus, in the Advanced Engineering Building – UQ’s newest & most iconic building in the St Lucia campus.

The UQ Weekend of Startups is not-for-profit and volunteer-run by UQ students, staff and the entrepreneurial community.

The Challenge

When we think about sustainability, it’s easily dismissed as a recent overused buzzword. But the fact is that solving problems with long term solutions is something that we can all have an impact on. Whether it be socially, environmentally or economically: we cannot maintain our quality of life and look to challenge inequities without planning for the future.

While environmental change is a huge part of sustainability this challenge is not limited to that avenue. Education, technology, health and relationships or anything with underlying faults can have a long term solution: a sustainable one.

The root of long term change lies in understanding and striving for sustainability, where the solution will encompass the requirements of the present in addition to that of the future.

Time is ticking. This is your chance to take this challenge head on and see how your ideas can be the next Sustainable Solution.

Why we care & why we’re excited

1. The University of Queensland brings together some of the world’s leading researchers and teachers in the fields of science, engineering, architecture, business, and information technology, to advance knowledge, develop solutions and educate people who move society forward. We want to have a transformational impact in the world in line with our Vision of creating A Culture of Innovation by aiming “to enhance a culture that fosters the creation and flourishing of brilliant ideas, which translate into solutions that matter”.

2. Here at the University of Queensland, we are interested in Entrepreneurship and Innovation. We’re looking for innovative and creative changemaking individuals with different skillsets and experiences because diversity creates innovation

3. We want to support and enhance the local, regional and global startup ecosystem by creating opportunities for budding & seasoned entrepreneurs, mentors, investors and communities to connect.
What is “UQ Weekend of Startups”?

UQ Weekend of Startups begins on Friday night, where you’ll hear all the ideas & find your team of 3–5 members. You’ll spend most of Saturday & Sunday validating & prototyping your idea; attending some workshops; meeting some mentors; and practising your pitch. By Sunday night you’ll be ready to deliver your pitch to our panel of judges!

The weekend is a great platform for entrepreneurs, experts and builders to come together and create a final product; test real-world applicability; and present your product to industry judges and investors.

The UQ Weekend of Startups is not-for-profit and volunteer-run by UQ students and staff, and the entrepreneurial community.

Let’s make some magic happen! Early bird tickets are now available!

Who’s it for?

The event will be heavily promoted across all UQ campuses, targeting students from all faculties, schools and institutes including undergraduates and postgraduates (55k students across UQ).

UQ students, alumni and all members of the general public are invited to join. Each team of 3–5 members formed on the weekend must have at least 1 current UQ student.

Diversity in the university and cross discipline are critical to new thinking and we will be seeking participants and coaches representing all of the above sectors as well as technologists and developers, designers and entrepreneurs.

How will the weekend be publicised?

Organisers will be utilising both traditional media and social media channels to publicise the event around the different UQ campuses. In parallel, we will be using UQ marketing PR channels to advertise the event and get exposed to the 55,000 UQ’s members.

Why get involved?

The following are what your organisation stands to gain through this event:

1. Access to 100+ highly motivated and capable students entering the startup phase.
2. The opportunity to directly market your organisation to a well-defined and expanding market.
3. Potential participants for incubators/accelerators/ internship programs run by your organisation.
4. Presence on all marketing material across campus as outlined in sponsorship package.
5. Presence on all social media marketing we undertake for the event.

How can you get involved?

Partner with us

The UQ Weekend of Startups is not-for-profit and volunteer-run by UQ students and staff, and the entrepreneurial community. We’re on the lookout for like-minded industry partners who’d like to support the local startup community and contribute to the success of the event through financial or pro-bono support. Coaches are regularly re-energised by the creative and unbound thinking that percolates through each “UQ Weekend of Startups”. We would welcome participation in the event from a sponsor organisation’s employees as participants to build on an idea, or to provide coaches / mentors at the weekend (for 2 hours sessions).

Run a workshop or become a mentor

Mentors and coaches are the backbone of the event. If you’d like to volunteer your time as a mentor or run a workshop that could benefit the participants by helping them validate or scale their ideas, then we’d love to hear from you.
